ICD Key Competencies for Director Effectiveness

– Task List –

T1	Understanding and evaluating strategic plans and reports presented by management.	In order to effectively understand and evaluate...a director must have some level of knowledge of a firm's capabilities and its competitive environment. A director must also understand that their responsibility is to oversee the development of the firm's strategic plan and obtain management updates on developments affecting the strategy as opposed to being directly involved in the management process. Some basic level of financial acumen is needed to support this task. A director must also be able to reach their own independent conclusions based on information provided by management to the board. This will require an ability to think objectively and with an open-mind in order to see possible trends and patterns or relationships presented by the data which may not be readily apparent in any documentation. Finally, a director must be able to communicate their feedback to management and other directors in a clear and logical manner.
T2	Monitoring financial performance.	Effective monitoring of financial performance requires directors to have some degree of financial acumen including the ability to read and interpret financial statements and reports. Some industry/company knowledge is required to provide context for the financial data.
T3	Recognizing and validating management's and fellow directors' underlying decision assumptions.	To be effective in recognizing and validating the decision making assumptions of others it is important to have the analytical skills needed to recognize groupthink dynamics and breakdowns in decision making logic. Individuals with this skill have a strong level of self-awareness and the ability to examine a situation with a completely objective and open-mind in order to reach independent conclusions.
T4	Selecting, hiring and evaluating top management.	An effective selection and hiring process requires directors to be knowledgeable of the specific needs of the company and its executive team and make a decision, often based on limited data, by exercising their best judgment. To establish an effective evaluation process, directors must have the ability to draw conclusions by impartial evaluation of other perspectives and views without prejudice or bias.
T5	Setting and negotiating compensation for top management.	Setting and negotiating compensation requires directors to exercise effective judgment aided by their industry/company knowledge regarding comparable compensation measures.
T6	Developing effective succession plans for top management.	An effective succession planning process requires directors to be knowledgeable of the specific needs of the company and its executive team and make a decision often based on limited data using their best judgment.
T7	Prioritizing relevant risks and ensuring appropriate risk levels.	To prioritize risks effectively requires establishing a logical process for first identifying all relevant risks based on an understanding of the industry/company and then determining an acceptable risk tolerance – the relationship between risk and possible reward which should be used to guide a director's decision-making process.
T8	Supporting an effective and efficient board meeting process.	An effective board meeting process is one which promotes effective and efficient decision-making based on clear, consistent and honest communication, effective judgment and reasoned debate. This process strives for consensus but also supports initiative and accepts opposition. When conflict does arise it is dealt with justice and fairness in order to restore healthy relationships.
